Special Thanks to our Major Donors

Cheryl and Zed Francis

Zed and Cheryl Francis

Located in Chicago's Woodlawn Community, YWCA Metropolitan Chicago's Laura Parks and Mildred Francis Center was opened in 2010 and named after the mothers of longstanding supporters Cheryl and Zed Francis. The center's comprehensive programming focuses on personal and financial empowerment, providing women and families with trauma interventions, career services, digital literacy education, and training and technical assistance for local entrepreneurs.

"Our family is proud to continue to invest in the important work being done by the YWCA on the south side of Chicago. We honor our mothers who were examples of strength and resiliency and wish to encourage the same from these communities that face obstacles but offer such promise. We believe in the power of the YWCA's services to foster skills growth, career development, employment retention, economic self-sufficiency and aspirational opportunities for women and youth," said donors Cheryl and Zed Francis.

Julian Grace Foundation

Thanks to a generous gift from the Julian Grace Foundation, YWCA Metropolitan Chicago expanded its footprint, opening the Julian Grace Innovation & Technology Institute. Located in the North Lawndale community, the center opened in 2016 to provide education and training to area youth and adults to secure sustained employment and support entrepreneurs and small businesses in the community.

"My family and I are proud to play a role in the continued success and growth of YWCA Metropolitan Chicago. We are committed to doing our part in supporting educational programs that have a positive impact on the health and vitality of our communities. We also recognize that education is a critical part of the solution to curtailing violence in our city," said Steve Sarowitz, Julian Grace Foundation; Founder and Chairman, Paylocity.
